for any approach to our ideal Kettledrum, and to the goests, who came in smiling crowds despite the rain, whose kindness saw no flaw, and who departed at last saying. "Let us come again." To those lind. helpers, one and all, we offer sincrest thanks. And if, after a few weeks space for rest, we do attempt a well-ordered kettledrum (for our debt is still more than half unpaid) we hope every one of these will raily again to our help, and thereby assure such a success as has not yet been approached. We shall do better next time, dear friends.
